According to latex foam producers at Interzum exhibitions, their product's star is rising around the world. Suppliers focused on satisfying manufacturer demand for thin layers of their product—"just a touch" of latex at the top of the bed, as one supplier said—in addition to highlighting innovations in latex mattress and pillow cores. Dunlop latex suppliers touted improved vulcanization processes that yield a consistent product. Others promoted their 100% natural latex products, without additives or fillers.

Arpico featured its new continuous-sheeting latex, which is designed to be a quilting or comfort layer. The company pours the latex onto a bed—not in a mold—and uses steam for vulcanization. Arpico is a Richard Pieris Natural Foams Ltd. company that manufactures 100% natural latex and is Global Organic Latex Standard-certified. It's based in Maharagama, Sri Lanka

Januka Karunasena, chief executive officer of Arpico, a Richard Pieris Natural Foams Ltd. company, with headquarters in Maharagama, Sri Lanka, discussed the company's increased production capacity and launch of a new sheet latex.
